Wonderful wildlife on show for Sony World Photography Awards 2020

Photos of a giraffe's bottom, a monkey deep in thought, a hunting eagle with its handler and a kookaburra surveying the burned forest have each taken out awards in the prestigious Sony World Photography Awards 2020.*

The images – captured by Marcus Westberg, of Sweden, Jan Simon, of Czech Republic, Kyaw Bo Bo Han, of Myanmar, and Adam Stevenson, of NSW, Australia – are winners in the contest's National Awards, which aims to support photographers across 63 countries and regions.

One photographer from each nation was honoured for one stand-alone image.

Mr Westberg said he had to spend several days in a hide in Onguma Private Reserve, near Etosha, Namibia, to capture his image of wildlife at a waterhole.*

"I knew if I was patient enough I would have a good chance of photographing giraffes as they came in to drink, but I never imagined any of them would squeeze in between the hide and the waterhole! This presented me with a different perspective than I had envisioned.*

"Patience, and a willingness to sit quietly in nature is often reward in itself – although in this case I was delighted to leave with an image like this."

A winner closer to home was photographer Adam Stevenson's entry and image of a kookaburra surveying the sweeping devastation of the NSW bushfires.*

The image was taken with an iPhone X near his home at Wallabi Point.

Stevenson called the picture – one of over 345,000 images entered in the contest – 'That's Nothing to Laugh About'.

He said: "As I watched the sun set through the smoke, a kookaburra appeared and allowed me to walk right up to it. We shared a moment, watching the sun fade behind the apocalyptic scene ... he was laughing."*

The overall winner of the Photographer of the Year 2020 title will be announced on April 16.
